

Adrian Garcia, Class of 2017

“South Pointe Christian School was a pivotal environment that shaped my high school years in a profoundly positive way. While no single subject or teacher stands out, it was the overall atmosphere that made the greatest impact on me. This environment allowed me to always have God in sight throughout my entire high school career. From the short prayers that we would do in class, to the chapels that allowed continual exposure to God’s word, both were a positive impact in my spiritual walk with the Lord. My involvement in soccer and baseball not only provided an avenue to excel in sports but also an opportunity to glorify God through athletic endeavors. This was by expressing my God given talents on the field but also nurturing relationships with my coaches and teammates.

After graduating from South Pointe, I pursued higher education in Engineering, eventually shifting to and earning a Bachelor's degree in Project Management. The foundation laid by South Pointe Christian School was instrumental in this journey, constantly reminding me of the values of hard work, faith, and integrity.

One of the most significant blessings from my time at South Pointe was meeting my beautiful wife, Serena Allison. We met during my sophomore year after I transferred from another high school, and if it weren't for South Pointe, our paths may never have crossed. We are now building our family with our amazing daughter, Emilee, and eagerly awaiting the arrival of our second child, Adrian Beckham. South Pointe Christian School not only shaped my academic and spiritual journey but also played a crucial role in bringing me together with my life partner and building the family I cherish today.”
